Tsck, Ed; Luck Hurder has at least ONE way to encourage profitable use of no-code techs: Public Service Awards. I am glad to see that the PS nets and volunteer efforts, which of course existed before the no-code was introduced, welcome the use of vhf/uhf operators whether they got their tech before or after no-code. My oldest son got a great deal of amateur radio encouragement at the age of 15 when we got him involved with us at public service events. And he was not the youngest in the net; that honor went to a YL of 14 who had come up through novice (took her test same time I did as a matter of fact). Nor was he the only no-coder: that honor went to the wife of another OM on the net.

We often used 2 meters for the 'local' link of message nets back in central TX; I suspect thats true in other places. Shouldn't be too hard to rack up the hours for a very honorable Public Service Award (see the pages of QST for details :-).

This is true, but the VEC licensing system requires (I think; I don't have my FCC Rule book in front of me right now) that one way or another, license applications must be acted on within 90 days. All the hysterics here about involving various politicians are, IMNSHO, a little ridiculous. Someone said it here before, but I will repeat it again because it has been the best advice to date:

Wait a bit (maybe until after the Easter Weekend) and then give the ARRL/VEC a call and explain to them the situation. At the least, they can tell you when the paperwork went over to the FCC and they will probably be able to help you find out what the snag is.
